Grass Tetany is a condition that can effect stock in late autumn, winter and spring. It can cause significant losses in production, even when there are no signs of illness. Grass tetany (also called grass staggers) occurs when animals are grazing pasture which has low available levels of magnesium, or as a result of increased body demands for magnesium during lactation or late pregnancy. Prevention is preferable to treatment as grass tetany often occurs without warning. Prevention involves supplementing the animals with magnesium during the period of greatest risk. Olsson's Beefmaster is the supplement to eliminate the deficiency with 111g/kg of available magnesium. APVMA Approval No. 40029/15/0905 however they must be used appropriately to avoid accidentally increasing the resistance of flies and lice to these chemicals. As products can serve both purposes, it may be appropriate to use them on numerous occasions throughout the year. Unfortunately this can also increase resistance by exposing parasites to the chemical more often, and at times where it is less effective to be targeting them. For this reason, it is important to rotate your chemical groups between uses, to ensure you're not using the same group two or three times in a row, with the goal being to keep resistant parasites from carrying on and multiplying. Of course, as certain products can only be applied in particular ways, this may limit your choices when thinking about trying another. Keeping clear and accessible records of your treatments will help you to know what you've used before, so you know what you can use next.

Lastly, consider eradicating lice from your flock altogether. This way, you can use products solely for flystrike prevention, without worrying about the crossover with your lice treatments!

CATTLE LEPTOSPIROSIS

IMPACT OF LEPTOSPIROSIS ON YOUR FARM

Cattle:
Leptospirosis can infect cattle leading to infertility, abortions and stillborn calves. Infections occur when cattle come in contact with leptospirae in contaminated urine. Leptospirae enter the body via the mucous membranes.

Humans:
Humans can also become infected with leptospirosis. Leptospirosis is contracted through direct contact with infected urine, placental material or contaminated water. The organisms enter the body through mucous membranes of the eyes and mouth, abraded skin, or water-logged feet. It can lead to chronic flu-like symptoms.

Ultravac® 7 in 1

Only Ultravac7in1:

- prevents shedding of leptospirae
- also protects against five key clostridial diseases of cattle
- stops the spread of leptospirosis in beef and dairy cattle
- can be used in calves from 4 weeks of age to provide early age protection
- prevents reproductive tract colonisation and prevents placental and foetal infection
